

Alan Kirkland will speak about the synergies between regulation and policy development, highlighting examples from a range of sectors where data gathered through regulatory action has informed policy development and law reform. Alan will also note the distinctions between regulation and policy advice to government, and the situations in which a separation between policy advice and regulatory activity is appropriate.